

The first 3 years of life are crucial to a child's development.

Early diagnosis of autism is critical. The sooner a child with an autism spectrum disorder (ASD) can begin receiving services, the better the outcome.

Early Intervention can make a vast impact on a child's behavior, functioning and future well-being.

- What signs to look for in identifying autism
- How to talk to parents if you suspect a child may have autism
- How to work with students with autism in the classroom

As a BCBA with 25 years working in the autism field I can help your staff better understand autism/behavioral issues and provide methods on how to work with children in your program.

Please contact me if you would like to schedule staff training on identifying early signs of an ASD; Overview of early child development; Guidance on what to do if you have a concern; Pointers on how to talk to parents.

Or if you have a topic that you would like to cover, please don't hesitate to ask. I can customize a training or workshop to meet your needs.

Schedule a training today!

Call (609) 608-5061 or email nfautismconsulting@gmail.com

Nina Finkler, M.Ed., LDT/C, BCBA
www.finklerautism.com